PORTATILÉ COLLECTION

A cultural shift has seen a growing trend for luxury consumers to utilise a back of house kitchen for preparing main meals, with the front of house kitchen designated as an entertainment zone for socialising with family, friends and business associates. With cooking no longer the main purpose, the front of house kitchen can play a completely focused role as a dedicated congenial hub, ideal for a dynamic style of social interaction, where bar style seating facilitates use of l pads etc or just drinks and occasional meals.

ONE KITCHEN FOR LIFE

Using advanced production techniques, Portatilé can be assembled and reassembled many times without deterioration, enabling the kitchen layout to be re-configured to meet the user's evolving life cycle. Portatilé can also be moved from one property to another. This makes Portatilé a kitchen for life.

FUNCTIONAL ART

The traditional boundary between kitchen and living space is increasingly blurred, with luxury clients seeking to achieve lateral space where the front of house kitchen can be seamlessly integrated into the living area. Portatilé repositions the kitchen as sculptural objects elevating and helping to transform the space. The materials, design and technological features allow the functional aspects of the kitchen to be hidden from view beneath electronically controlled sliding work surfaces until required.

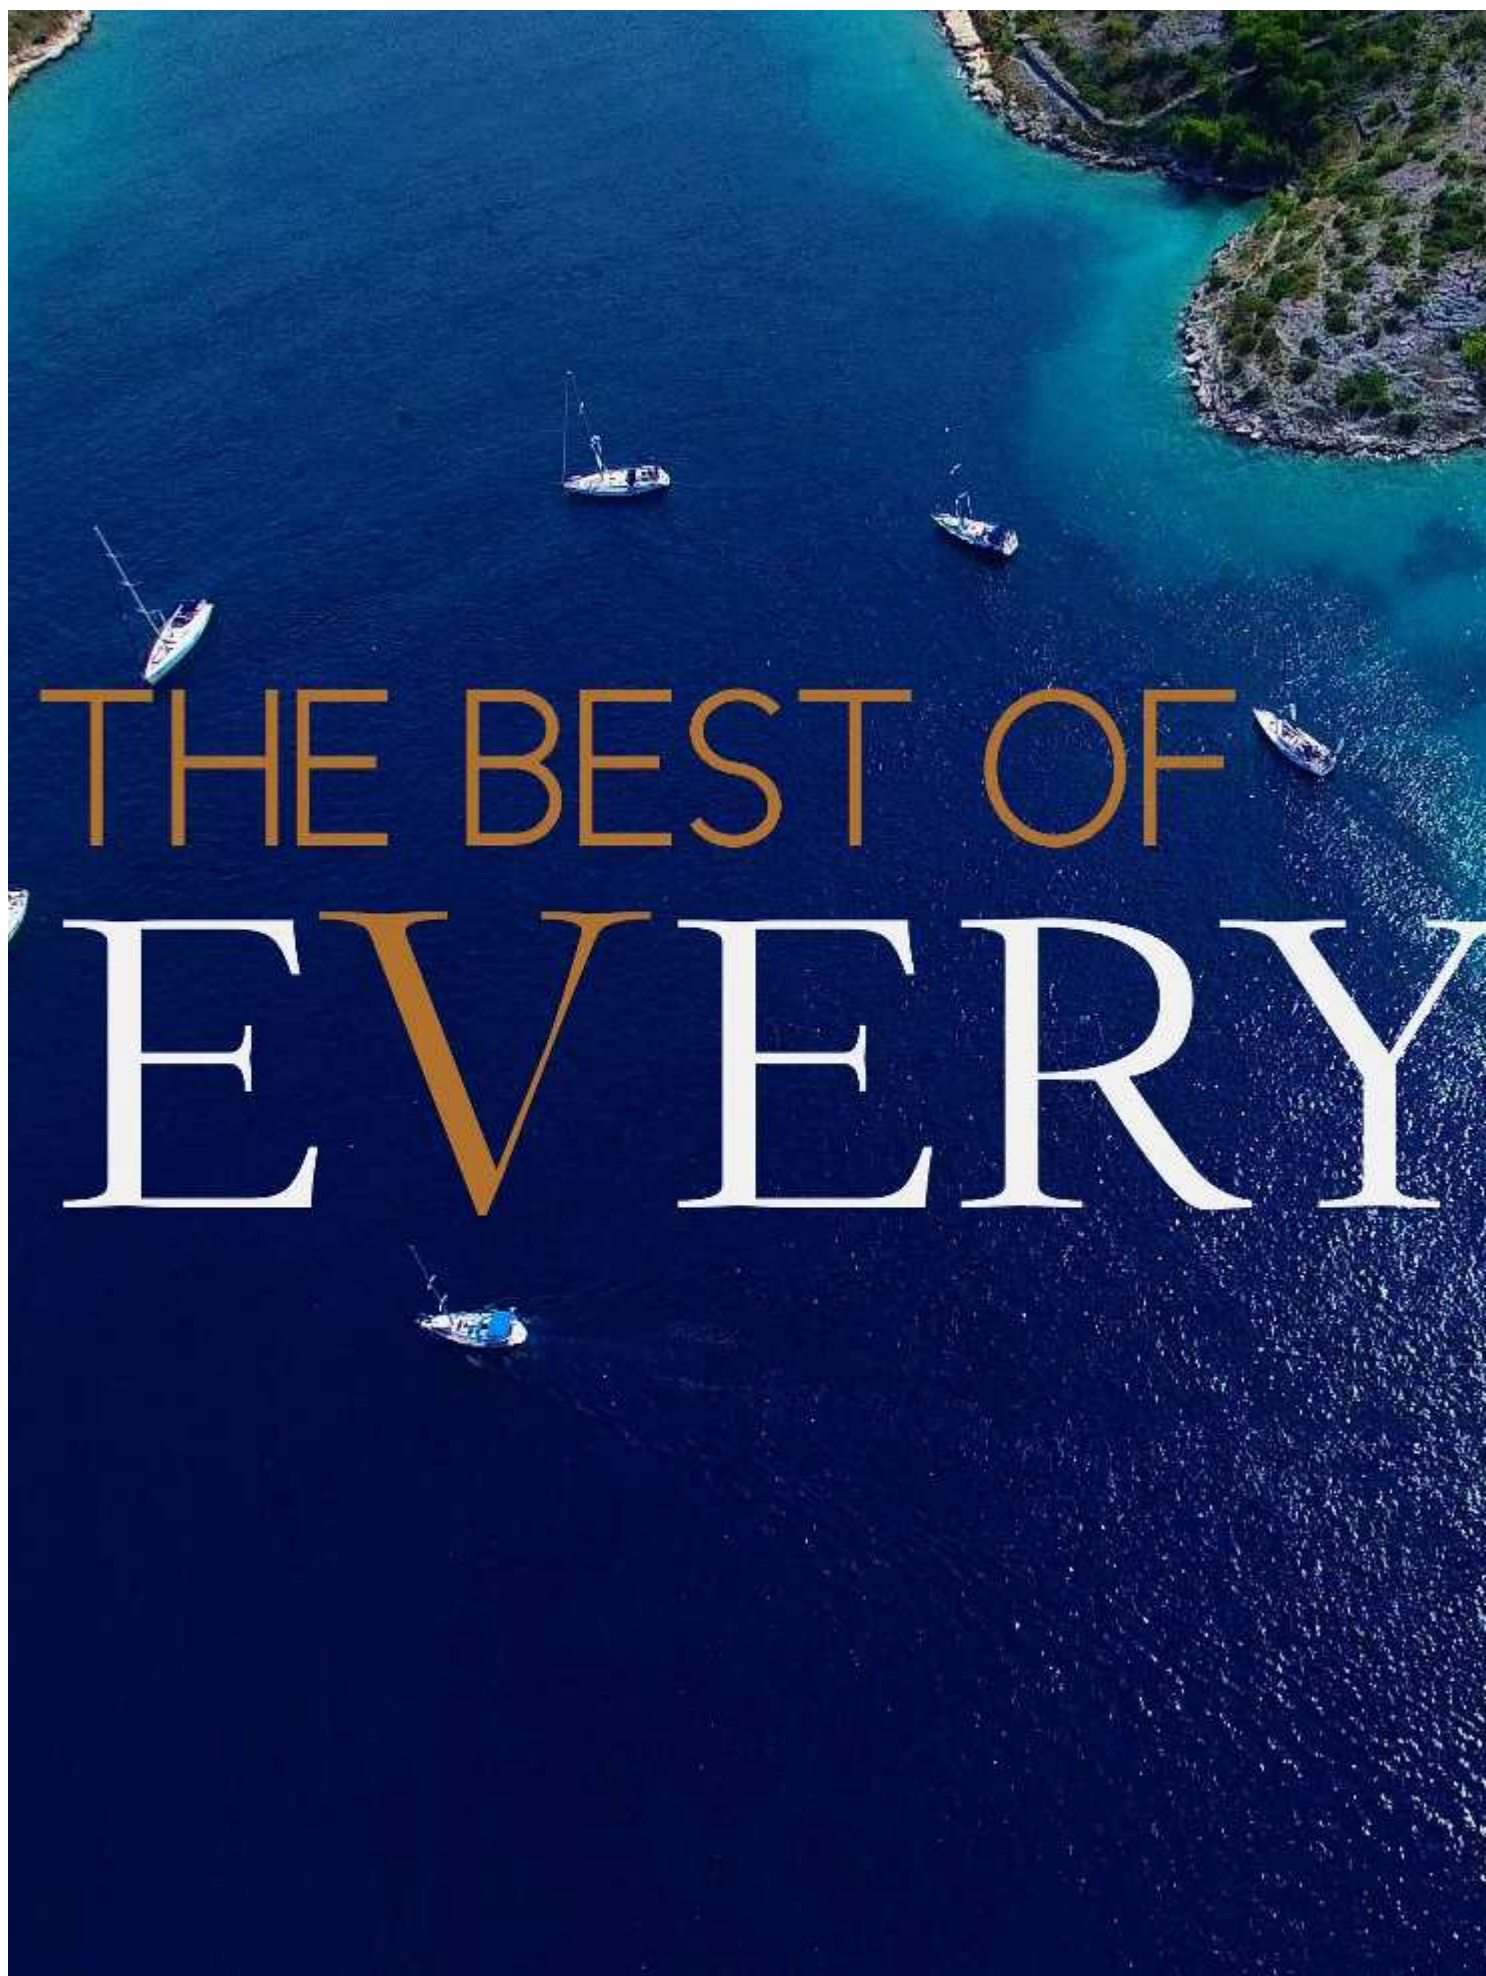

SUSTAINABILITY

Using Rossana's advanced engineering techniques allows around 20 linear metres of sophisticated kitchen furniture to be installed within 48 hours. Portatilé is specifically designed to be re-configured or complimented by additional Rossana elements, in response to the users changing circumstances. This eliminates the need for renewal and makes Portatilé the most sustainable kitchen in the luxury sector.

LAMBORGHINI URUS

Lamborghini launches its third model the Lamborghini Urus, the first Super Sport Utility Vehicle, and creates a new niche in the luxury segment with benchmarking power, performance and driving dynamics, unparalleled design, luxury and daily usability. The Lamborghini Urus adopts a visionary approach based on the infusion of Lamborghini DNA into the most versatile vehicle, the SUV. The Urus elevates the SUV to a level not previously possible, the Super SUV. It is a true Lamborghini in terms of design, performance, driving dynamics and emotion as well as drivable every day in a range of environments, says Stefano Domenicali, Automobili Lamborghini Chairman and CEO. The Urus fits perfectly within the Lamborghini family as a high performance car. It is the culmination of intensive development and passionate skill to create a new breed of bull: a Super SUV that transcends the boundaries of expectations and opens the door to new possibilities, for both our brand and our customers. 4.0 liter V8 twin -turbo engine

V8 twin-turbo engine delivering 650 hp (478 kW) at 6,000 rpm, maximum 6,800 rpm, and 850 Nm of maximum torque already at 2,250 rpm. With 162.7 hp/l the Urus claims one of the highest specific power outputs in its class and the best weight-to-power ratio at 3,38 kg/hp. The Urus accelerates from 0-100 km/h in 3.6 seconds, 0-200 km/h in 12,8 seconds and with a top speed of 305 km/h it is the fastest SUV available. The Lamborghini Urus is as much a luxury SUV as the most powerful, with a super sports car dynamism to be enjoyed by both driver and passengers. Its low-line coupé styling and commanding road position belie the very comfortable ride, higher ground clearance, and luxurious space within together with the latest technologies. The Urus provides easy driving in the city, maximum comfort during long journeys, thrilling super sports car dynamics on the road and track, and versatile off-road abilities in a range of environments making it an ideal automobile of choice for many of the terrains across the African continent.

SAME CITY, DIFFERENT PERSPECTIVE

LONDON | UNITED KINGDOM

LONDON is renowned as one of the world's most exciting global cities, and rightly so. Alongside the English language, convenient time zone and world-class education system, the diverse culture and eclectic mix of lifestyles make it a vibrant place to call home. As well as having four world heritage sites, eight spacious royal parks and over 200 museums and galleries, London is also a leading centre for finance, technology and creativity and is one of the safest, most stable cities in the world.

Education forms an enormous part of the appeal of this city. Students flock from all over the globe to study in London, and whether they buy or rent, there are so many places to choose to live and study. Security, lifestyle, transport links and amenities are all important factors for students and their parents and the quality of new build homes is already world class in London, and is only getting better.

The city is formed of 33 boroughs, each with their individual neighbourhoods which appeal to the multi-cultured and cosmopolitan range of residents. Once dominated by its financial core, the City, in particular, is now opening up as a highly sought after residential location. There is now an increasing desire to live close to work as the quality of residential offering starts to match the aspirational lifestyle of city workers.

Typically, the City of London has been a place to work and not a place to live; despite being home to 370,000 workers, only 7,915 people live there, the lowest population in any London borough. However, this is slowly starting to change as an increasing number of Londoners are keen to benefit from living close to work; especially now as the area's retail, leisure and entertainment offering has improved markedly over recent years. But, the area doesn't just attract city workers; it is also popular with students.

The demand, coupled with the particularly acute underlying lack of supply in the area, has significantly pushed up house prices. Last year the City had one of the highest rental and house price growths across London; average prices now stand at £912,145. Over the last decade house prices in the City of London increased by 224%, which compares with 150% in Kensington and Chelsea and 140% in Westminster. This is causing the gap between prime property prices and City prices to narrow and points towards the City becoming a firm part of London's prime residential property market, which up until recently was confined to the west of London.

In fact, if current trends continue, the City will have caught up with the West End in about five years' time. The pick-up in demand is expected to continue, with projected population increases of 8.2% over the next decade promising to outpace growth rates in historically more residential boroughs such as Lambeth, Camden, Westminster, Wandsworth and Hammersmith and Fulham. The development of a residential market is expected to run symbiotically with this predicted increase in the area's population.

New developments under constructions are designed to attract the attention of elite city workers who demand a luxury specification. These schemes have recently been achieving prices in excess of £2,000 per sq ft. Although new build development has increased, it is still not enough to satisfy latent demand. In the City there are currently just 161 units under construction and a further 654 in the planning pipeline; this is around a third of the level needed with projected household growth.

EXPLORE

ONE CROWN PLACE

These are exciting times for London's most historic district. Joining the traditional 'establishment' are cool new bars and dining concepts, boutique fitness studios and pop-ups, inspiring a new mood, where creativity rubs shoulders with commerce. This new chapter for the City ensures that, as well as being the world's financial centre, it's now also a place where people come to relax and have fun.

Few residential addresses offer such easy access to London's most exciting districts. In a prime spot where the historic City of London meets fashionable Shoreditch and Old Street, One Crown Place embodies the best of urban living, with fast connections to the rest of the capital and beyond.

From One Crown Place's prime location, navigating London's most eclectic neighbourhoods couldn't be simpler. Just a few minutes from Liverpool Street Station, and with Shoreditch and Old Street a short walk away, there's plenty to explore in the local area. The rest of London, from the West End to Canary Wharf, is within a tube journey, plus there are quick connections to all London's airports. What's more, with Crossrail services scheduled to begin at Liverpool Street Station in 2018, travelling both east and west will be even faster and efficient.

TITE STREET, CHELSEA NU:

COUTURE CONSTRUCTION LONDON

“nu: do it all” and they do it efficiently, effortlessly and most importantly...with style.

nu: founded by Nick Jeffries have successfully fused together our British love of fashion and the English man's home being his castle, they have set Kensington and Chelsea alight with their expertise in design and construction. With high profile clients such as Kylie Minogue who quote nu: as her Gucci builders and David Gandy, projects designed by nu: have fast become synonymous with bespoke, seamlessly finished, exclusively designed and highly sought after. London, capital city of the UK is among the oldest of the new world's great cities with a history spanning nearly two millennia—it is truly one of the most cosmopolitan. London, by far, is Britain's largest metropolis, and is also the country's economic, transportation, and cultural centre.

With that said, when it comes to Property Development, London has been viewed as quite linear, traditionally designed and often worlds apart from the laws that govern high fashion. However, nu: have changed the property landscape, described as becoming the backbone of Luxury Builders In London, in their own way they have brought their own sense of couture construction to the heart of this city, much to the joy of London's elite.

From decadent refurbishments that bring visions to life to basements that create beautiful extra living spaces, adding substantial value. nu: do it all, and they do it efficiently, effortlessly and most importantly....with style. As quoted in The Telegraph, successful British male model, David Gandy's house was not in great shape when he bought it. It had spiral carpets, floral wallpaper, a lavatory tacked on to the kitchen and few original features worth keeping.

This meant he felt he had carte blanche to give it a complete overhaul, which he did with the help of nu: They dug eight feet down into the basement to make space for a bedroom and a utility room, as well as a large snug, which extends a few feet beyond the back of the house and is partially lit by a narrow skylight running its width. nu: could be seen as true mavericks of the construction world, as quoted by Bloomberg.

The West London boroughs of Kensington and Chelsea have outlawed so called mega basements, banning the residential digs in some of the most expensive parts of the city. The controversial technique saw some property owners excavate three stories underground, adding millions to the value of their homes and driving some neighbours to protest.

However, with an impeccable track record and smooth project delivery, Nick is set to be building the very last Kensington super-basement. The bottom line is, for those of us wanting more when it comes to construction in London, for those in search of the je ne sais quoi of property re-design, nu: simply must be our first port of call.

Bringing out-of-the-box construction excellence, and a team of dedicated, talented experts committed to excellence, it's time for us to shake off traditions of old and get courageous with our homes. As the great fashion icon Diane Furstenberg said Attitude is everything.
