CLIENT BRIEF

BRIEF

The AFWL brand had been established for 11 years within the UK, however, the public perception of the brand was negative, outdated, no longer culturally relevant and with consistently dipping sales, was no longer commercially viable.

At the time that Bluxe was approached, the AFWL Founder was looking to wind down the brand, however she agreed to work with Bluxe to remedy the public perception of the brand, increase sales and expand the brand's audience.

Bluxe created and executed a series of targeted strategies to deliver on the client brief and were brought on board to add value as the Commercial Partner for the brand.

As a result of our strategies, execution and involvement in the implementation of a series of initiatives we created, the brand garnered national attention and expanded their audience reach, capturing a completely new demographic of buyers. As a result of the brand restructure, Bluxe secured the Mayor of London's Office as a sponsor for the client.

In addition to this, all 200 trade stands were sold (with a higher ticket price) and designers that exhibited completely sold all of their stock over the 2 day event for the first time in 8 years. Bluxe also introduced a new revenue stream which was a food hall. Bluxe were solely responsible for the marketing and sales of this revenue stream. All food vendor spaces sold out and the food vendors sold out of stock and re-signed up to participate for the following year.

As a result of Bluxe's re-branding and strategies, for the first time, the brand secured culturally relevant celebrities for endorsement and highly respected institutions such as the V&A Museum, the UN's initiative Ethical Fashion Initiative (EFI) among others, to raise the profile of the event and change the brand's public image.

This resulted in a significant increase in ticket sales, a new targeted Afrocentric demographic of buyers, the successful introduction of luxury brands, and the Bluxe Business Forum, which had participation from international leaders of industry, royalty and dignitaries.

The re-brand was a success with an uplift in sales, expanded demographic, new and proven revenue streams and a new and positive public perception. The brand has since launched in additional territories including Brasil, utilising Bluxe's rebrand strategies and restructuring.

This resulted in the companies most profitable year in 10 Years.
